The Honourable Alvin Curling
Minister of Housing
777 Bay Street, 17th Floor
Toronto, Ontario
M5G 2E5

Dear Minister,

It is my privilege and pleasure to submit the Annual Report of the Residential Tenancy Commission, pursuant to Section 91(1) of the Residential Tenancies Act, for the fiscal year April 1, 1984 to March 31, 1985.

During the period being reported the Residential Tenancy Commission was a part of the Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations. This Report is being submitted to you since the Minister of Housing, formerly the Minister of Municipal Affairs and Housing, became responsible for the Residential Tenancy Commission effective May 22, 1985.

Yours respectfully,

- . Landlord applications received in the fiscal year were 1,793 involving 58,043 rental units. In the previous year 2,074 applications were received involving 76,839 rental units.

- . Landlords requested an average increase of 15.95% and were granted an average increase of 10.03%, the lowest average increase granted since the establishment of the Commission in 1979.

12,17

- . Ten percent of all units coming through rent review were granted a rent increase at or below the guideline rate of 6%. Only 2% of all units received rent increases above 20%.

22

- . A total of 3,336 tenant applications for rent rebate were received in the year. Informal mediation between landlords and tenants, assisted by a Commission mediator, led to an agreement in seven out of every ten cases finalized during the year.

6,7

- . Tenants who received a rent rebate obtained an average rebate of $757. Tenants recovered from landlords approximately $1.3 million in excess rents paid.

24

- . Convictions were obtained in six prosecutions against landlords who breached Commission orders or who were in contempt of the Commission, resulting in fines ranging from $1,000 to $20,000.

- . 306,000 inquiries were received in the year. Three times as many tenants as landlords utilized this service.

8,26

- . The appeal rate was 20%, representing one in five initial orders appealed.

REPORT TO THE MINISTER
FOR FISCAL YEAR 1984/85

1. INTRODUCTION

Review of Fiscal 1984/85
Operations

The Residential Tenancy Commission completed its sixth year of operation in the fiscal year. The Commission of Inquiry into Residential Tenancies (Thom Inquiry) released its Phase I Report on rent review reform and the Government announced, on October 30, 1984, its intention to implement major changes to the rent review process. As an immediate measure the Government revoked the regulation exempting residential units renting for $750 or more effective October 30, 1984. The government further extended the provisions of the Residential Complexes Financing Costs Restraint Act from its scheduled expiry of December 31, 1984 to December 31, 1985.

The year saw workload, as measured by the receipt of incoming whole building review applications, continue its decline from the previous year and from the peak levels of 1982/83. The declining workload had a favourable impact on the applications backlog, and the number of outstanding whole building review applications was reduced to 409 at year-end (a five-year low) from 566 on March 31, 1984 and 1,978 on March 31, 1983. Tenant applications for rent rebate increased for the fifth successive year reflecting a greater concern by tenants of illegal rents and of remedies available to them under the Act for the recovery of these rents. The number of appeals filed and appeal hearings held declined sharply during the year commensurate with the decline in initial-level hearings.

During the year the Commission initiated activities for determining non-compliance with Commission orders. Random spot checks lead to intensive investigation and prosecutions in a number of cases.

Future Outlook

On July 2, 1985 the Government announced its intention to submit to the next session of the Legislature several amendments to the Residential Tenancies Act. Included in the new measures would be the reduction of the guideline rate from 6% to 4% applicable to rent increase effective from August 1, 1985; the extension of rent review to all private rental dwellings effective August 1, 1985; and the establishment of a rent registry. Subsequent announcements by the government indicated that all rental units renting for more than $750 as well as all private rental units occupied since January 1, 1976 would be included under rent review effective August 1, 1985.

However, until such time as legislation is introduced and passed the Commission will continue to operate under its present mandate.

These legislative changes are expected to significantly increase the Commission's workload.

2. LEGISLATIVE AND POLICY DEVELOPMENT

Thom Inquiry - Background

In 1982 the purchase and resale of some 11,000 rental units took place in Metro Toronto in a rapid series of transactions involving increasing purchase prices. These events, combined with perceived inadequacies of the current system, led the Government to decide that an independent, exhaustive study of the rent review system was required.

On November 16, 1982 the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations announced the establishment of a Commission of Inquiry into Residential Tenancies under Stuart Thom, Q.C.. The Inquiry was asked to "look into the application of the existing laws to the regulation of rents and to make recommendations or changes that will eliminate or reduce any of the inequities that have been found in the present system".

As an interim measure the Minister introduced a rent restraint bill entitled the Residential Complexes Financing Costs Restraint Act that limited to 5% rent increases attributable to a pass-through of financing costs arising out of the sale of rental property.

Thom Inquiry - Phase I

Because of the complexity of matters to be dealt with, the Inquiry divided its work into two phases. The first phase examined in detail the current system of rent review and recommended improvements that would make the system more equitable to landlords and tenants. The Inquiry held some 80 days of public hearings in major cities across Ontario and received 120 written submissions from interested landlord and tenant groups, corporations, government agencies and private individuals.

The Residential Tenancy Commission was represented at the hearings by counsel and responded to the various concerns raised by other parties. The Commission also recommended ways to improve the rent review process. The Phase I Report was released by the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations in the Legislature on October 30, 1984.

The Report contains 65 major recommendations touching on virtually every aspect of the present rent review system.*

After much study and discussion the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations, on March 20, 1985, announced several proposed changes to the Residential Tenancies Act, to be introduced in the next session of the Legislature.

Highlights of the proposed changes:

- Appointment of both landlord and tenant representatives to the Board of Commissioners of the Residential Tenancy Commission.
- Reduction of the guideline rate from 6% to 4% for one year.
- Making permanent the revocation of the $750 exemption effective October 30, 1984.
- Permanently adopting the ceiling of 5% on financing cost pass-through as a result of the purchase of rental property.
- Introducing measures to enable tenants to obtain rent reductions where costs allowed in previous rent reviews have subsequently declined or run their course.

*Copies of the Report of the Commission of Inquiries into Residential Tenancies (Volume I) may be obtained at the Ontario Government Bookstore, 880 Bay Street, Toronto, Ontario M7A 1N8.

- . Introduction of new incentives for landlords to maintain their properties but removal of those features that encourage conversion to luxury accommodation.
- . Reaffirmation of commitment to a Rent Registry system.
- . Commitment to implement a number of the procedural improvements as well as a substantial majority of the formal recommendations contained in Volume I of the Thom Report.

Thom Inquiry - Phase II

The purpose of Phase II is to define the objectives of rent review in a theoretical sense and examine measures, in addition to rent review, that might assist in achieving these objectives. A second objective of Phase II is to find means of providing rental accommodation at fair rents for accommodations to which the Residential Tenancies Act would apply.

As part of Phase II, a number of research reports were prepared covering a broad cross-section of rent review subject matter, and these were discussed at public hearings in October, November and December, 1984. Some of the research material prepared for public discussion included:

- Possible Rationales for Rent Regulation
- Survey of Financial Performance of Landlords (before and after the introduction of rent regulations in Ontario).
- An Economic Analysis of Investment in the Regulatory Process for Rental Accommodation
- Rent Regulation as a Policy Instrument for
  - . Alleviating the Housing Affordability Problem

- . Stabilizing Rent Levels
- . Complementing the Security of Tenure Provisions of the Landlord and Tenant Act.
- An Analysis of the Distributive Impact of Rent Regulation.

Policy Guidelines

The Commission issues a number of policy and procedural guidelines and informational material to assist Commission staff and the public in the interpretation and application of the Act. In particular the Commission issues Interpretation Guidelines, comprising procedural and rent review guidelines, which are intended to assist Commissioners and the public in the interpretation and application of certain key provisions of the Residential Tenancies Act. However, these are not binding statements of law and do not in any way restrict the discretion of the Commissioner where he/she may have a different interpretation of the Act.

The Interpretation Guidelines are continually being updated to reflect legislative changes, court decisions and experience of the Commission in dealing with specific situations. New guidelines are developed to address emerging issues or clarify problem areas.

3. ROLE AND ORGANIZATION OF THE COMMISSION

Role of the Commission

The Residential Tenancy Commission is a quasi-judicial body established under the authority of the Residential Tenancies Act, Revised Statutes of Ontario 1980, chapter 452. It has jurisdiction under the Act to review rent increases at the request of either a landlord or tenant. Its activities include:

- reviewing applications from landlords requesting approval to charge rent increases above a percentage guideline specified in the Act; and determining the maximum monthly rent which can be charged
- reviewing applications from tenants disputing rent increases proposed by landlords which fall within the guideline
- reviewing applications from tenants claiming a rebate for rents charged in excess of the amount allowed under the Act, establishing the lawful monthly rent and the amount of rebate to be paid.

Commissioners conduct hearings into applications from landlords and tenants and issue orders along with reasons setting out the maximum rent that may be charged. Appeal Commissioners consider appeals to decisions of Commissioners. Appeal hearings are conducted by a panel of 3 Appeal Commissioners, and the panel's order is final under the Act.

The Commission also serves as a source of information on the residential portion of the Landlord and Tenant Act. This Act prescribes rights and responsibilities on many aspects of landlord-tenant relationships, including such areas as evictions, tenancy privacy rights, responsibilities of landlords and tenants for maintenance and repairs, and security deposits. The Commission publishes the pamphlet "Your Rights and Obligations under the Landlord and Tenant Act."

Organization of the Commission

The administration of the Commission is vested in a Board of Commissioners appointed by the Lieutenant Governor-in-Council. The Board consists of the Chief Tenancy Commissioner, three Regional Commissioners, three Appeal Commissioners and two legal counsel from the Ministry of the Attorney General.

The Commission serves the public through 21 offices which are administratively grouped into three regions. These offices receive and process applications from landlords and tenants and provide inquiry services to the public on rent review and other landlord-tenant matters. A group of Head Office staff provides legal, technical and administrative support services to the local offices.

At year-end the Commission had 203 staff which included 24 Commissioners, 15 Appeal Commissioners and 3 Regional Commissioners.

Budget Performance

Actual expenditure for the year was $7.4 million against an appropriation of $7.7 million. This compares to an actual expenditure of $7.7 million in the previous year. The reduction in expenditure was due to a reduction in workload.

4. WORKLOAD AND SERVICE LEVEL ANALYSES

Whole Building Review Applications

During the year the Commission received 1,793 landlord applications for whole building review involving 58,043 rental units. These figures represent decreases of 14% and 24% respectively from 2,074 applications and 76,839 rental units received in the previous year.

The chart below represents incoming whole building review applications, by quarter, for years 1984/85 and 1983/84 (see Figure 1).

The lower number of applications received in the year reflects a falling inflation rate and generally stable interest rates in the 11.5%-13.0% range (chartered banks prime) for most of the year. Inflation, as measured by changes in the Consumer Price Index, was at the 4% level for much of the year enabling many landlords to operate within the prescribed guideline rate.

Continuing the trend of the past several years applications by landlords of large complexes (i.e. apartment buildings with elevators), while representing a relatively small proportion (25%) of all hearings held, resulted in decisions affecting a large segment (78%) of total rental units involved. (Refer to Tables 2 and 3 in Chapter 6).

The service level for whole building review applications showed substantial improvement over last year; on average the time required to process an application from day of receipt until the order was issued was reduced by approximately 25%. The time taken to process an application during the year averaged 5 months, a reduction of 2 months from the previous year's average. Nearly half of all applications (46%) were processed in less than four months.

Whole Building Review Applications Received

The average amount of time taken to prepare and issue an order of the Commission following a hearing was just under 2 months. For small complexes (1-6 units) orders were issued in just over 1 month; very large complexes (300 + units) required just under 3 months.

An improvement was also shown in the number of orders issued prior to the effective date of the first rent increase. While this was achieved in only 13% of all applications, this rate is nearly double that of the previous year.

While not ideal, this change in service level does indicate an improvement in the Commission's service to the public. The Commission anticipates further improvement.

Tenant Applications for Rent Rebate

The number of applications for rent rebate increased 6% in the year to 3,336 from 3,135 in the previous year. The substantial increase in these applications in the last few years could be attributed to an increased tenant awareness and concern over the possibility of rent overcharges.

The service level for these applications improved slightly from last year. It took an average of 72 days to successfully mediate an application where one was so resolved, compared to 100 days in the previous year. Where a hearing was required the average time taken between receipt of the application and issuance of the order was 143 days, down from 167 days in the last year.

The chart (Figure 2) below depicts tenant applications for rent rebate, by quarter, for the past two years.

Tenant Applications disputing a Proposed Rent Increases

These applications dropped sharply in the year to 550 from 852 in the previous year. The decline may reflect awareness by tenants that they need not challenge increases above the guideline rate as all such increases must be approved by the Commission at a whole building review hearing.

The service level in the resolution of these applications was below expectation. The average time taken between receipt of the application and a mediated settlement, where one was achieved, was 97 days compared to 88 days in the previous year. Where mediation was unable to resolve the matter and a hearing was held, it took an average of 202 days to process the application including mediation time, up from 172 days in the previous year.

The chart (Figure 3) below represents incoming tenant applications disputing proposed rent increases, by quarter, for the past two years.

Mediation

The Residential Tenancy Commission is required to "assist the parties to the proceeding in attempting to settle the matter by agreement". The Commission performs this duty through the process of mediation. Where a mediated agreement does not occur, a formal hearing is held by the Commission.

During the year the Commission assisted the parties in reaching an agreement in 1,906 tenant applications for rent rebate compared to 2,028 in the previous year (see Table 10, Chapter 6). This represents a resolution rate of 65% of tenant applications for rent rebate by mediation, a slight decline from 71% last year.

For tenant applications disputing proposed rent increase a total of 138 applications were resolved by mediation, down from 204 last year.

Appeals

During the year, the number of appeals filed with the Commission from decisions of first-level applications declined to 535 from 798 in the previous year, corresponding with the decline in applications for rent review. The proportion of tenant applications being appealed has been increasing in the past few years. For example, of the total appeals filed 44% related to tenant applications in 1984/85 compared to 24% in 1983/84 and only 7% in 1982/83.

Tenant Applications disputing Proposed Rent Increases (s.127)

The number of appeal applications awaiting a hearing on March 31, 1984 was 127. Receipts throughout the year were 535. The number of applications awaiting a hearing at the end of the year was reduced to 87.

The service level for appeals improved from the previous year. It took an average of 188 days to process an appeal (whole building review) in the year compared to 217 days in the previous year. The decline is attributable to a lower volume of applications and the appointment of four Appeal Commissioners for a portion of the year. The 188 days are broken down into component parts as follows (with last year's figures in brackets): initial order to filing of appeal 22 days (15 days); appeal application to hearing 92 days (148 days); and appeal hearing to issuance of order 75 days (54 days).

The chart (Figure 4) below illustrates appeal workload, by quarter, for the past two years.

Inquiries

The Commission continued to receive a large volume of inquiries from the public on a wide range of residential tenancy matters. In the year a total of 306,000 inquiries were received, down marginally from the 312,000 inquiries received a year earlier.

As in the previous year, three times as many tenants as landlords made inquiries on subjects ranging from leases and security deposits to notice of rent increase and hearing procedures. A greater proportion of inquiries related to landlord and tenant matters (63%) compared to rent review matters (32%). Approximately 90% of all inquiries were by telephone while the other 10% were walk-in or mail inquiries.

Monitoring, Investigations and Prosecutions

The Commission continued its investigation and prosecution efforts with a view to ensuring compliance with rent review legislation.

In the year 27 new investigations were started, referred either by Commission staff or tenants. A total of 24 investigations were completed during the year and at year-end 11 investigations were still in progress.

A new initiative undertaken during the year was the monitoring of rents with the objective of determining compliance with Residential Tenancy Commission orders. During the last six months of the year 57 apartment complexes involving 4,011 units were sampled. Of these, 6 complexes with 196 units were identified for further investigation and possible prosecution. Tenants in 7 complexes containing 1,478 units were referred to local offices to file an application to determine the lawful rent for their units. At year-end, 18 complexes involving 829 rental units were still being sampled.

Some investigations revealed breach of Commission orders and charges were laid in a number of cases. In the year 7 prosecutions were finalized, of which 6 resulted in convictions. In the seventh case, charges were withdrawn by the Crown. These convictions are summarized below.

1. Four prosecutions for knowingly disobeying Commission orders resulted in convictions in Provincial Court against two companies and three individuals. The fines ranged from $1,000 to $7,500 and totalled $16,500.
2. In the first decision of its kind the Supreme Court of Ontario found an Ottawa landlord to be in contempt of the Commission for refusing to take an oath and provide information to the Commission in the course of rent review proceedings. While no fines were levied, the Court ordered the landlord to be sworn-in as a witness, to answer all questions and to produce all documents legally required by the Commission.

3. In a landmark decision, also involving contempt charges, the Supreme Court of Ontario found a landlord company, Toronto Apartment Buildings Co. Ltd., and its affiliated furniture rental company to be in contempt of the Commission for breach of rent review orders involving three Metro Toronto area buildings. The Court ordered the payment of a $20,000 fine and a further $30,000 to cover the Government's legal costs. The landlord was also required to establish a trust fund in the amount of $210,000 for the purpose of repaying tenants excess rents charged.

Appeals to Divisional Court

Decisions made by appeal panels of the Commission may be further appealed on questions of law to Divisional Court. Applications for judicial review of Commission decisions may also be made to the Divisional Court.

Court decisions provide important guidance for Commissioners in interpreting the Act and conducting hearings. Recent court decisions have affirmed the discretionary powers of Commissioners and established criteria for resolving procedural issues.

In the year an additional 69 Commission decisions were challenged in Divisional Court. During the year 48 cases were resolved, the majority being discontinued by the appellants. The court delivered judgment in 6 cases. At year-end there were 93 cases in progress.

Since the creation of the Commission in 1979, the Court has delivered judgment in 13 cases. The Commission's decisions were upheld in 9 instances, one decision was quashed on judicial review, and three were sent back to the Commission for reconsideration at a hearing. Some important court decisions are summarized below.

1. In the case of Tatsis v. Barbara Apartments, January 20, 1982, 132 D.L.R. (3d) 53, the court held to be proper a statement by the appeal panel that the allowance of relief of hardship, while a discretionary matter, should be denied only in unusual circumstances. The court also held that in considering the question of whether there had been an increase or deterioration in the standard of maintenance and repair of the complex, there is no obligation on the Commission to consider this standard under the heading of an assessment as to the quality or efficiency of management. It would require express statutory language in the Act to impose this additional obligation.
2. In Liebert et al. v. Residential Tenancy Commission, July 7, 1983 (unreported), the court held that the holder of an interest in a stock co-operative is a "landlord" within the meaning of the Residential Tenancies Act.
3. The case of 400 Walmer Rd., Toronto, January 13, 1983 (unreported), concerned the appeal provisions under the Act. It was held by the court that section 117 of the Act contemplates a limited right of appeal and does not contemplate a trial de novo, in whole or in part, regardless of the form of the Notice of Appeal.
4. A very significant decision for the Commission was that of Triassic Holdings Ltd. v. Muirhead et al. (1983), 40 O.R. (2d) 651. The court held in this case that on a landlord's application for rent review, the Commission is required by the Act to scrutinize each and every cost submitted by the landlord, and has the discretion to decide whether all, part, or none of the amounts submitted should go into the formula to determine the rent increase. The Commission's action in this case of notionalizing a mortgage financing cost instead of using actual figures was therefore found to be within jurisdiction.
5. The case of Wolek et al. v. Herzog et al. (1984), (46) O.R. (2d) 513, also represents an important decision. The Commission had dismissed an appeal because of the tenant appellants' failure to give the landlord a copy of their Notice of Appeal and Statement of Disputed and Additional Facts. The court held that this decision was in error, because it appeared to disregard section 93(1) of the Act, which provides that "Every decision of the Commission shall be upon the real merits and justice of the case". The court determined that in the absence of a finding that there had been some unfairness or underhanded conduct on the part of the tenants, or that there was some reason why the landlord could not be protected from additional prejudice involved in the adjournment that was necessary, the Commission should have granted an appropriate adjournment.

Staff Development

Throughout the year 10 different technical training courses were given to employees and Commissioners. A total of 563 participant days were involved in this training as well as 147 resource person days.

5. RENT REVIEW RESULTS

Whole Building Review Hearings

In the year, based on 1,399 hearings held for which orders were issued, landlords requested an average increase of 15.95% and were granted an average increase of 10.03% (see Table 1, Chapter 6). The comparable figures for the previous year were 19.68% and 10.59% respectively.

Reaffirming the experience of previous years, landlords of smaller complexes generally requested and received larger rent increases, and landlords of larger complexes requested and received smaller rent increases. For example, triplex owners, on average, requested increases of 27.2% and were granted increases of 15.3%. By contrast, landlords of large elevator complexes (averaging 117 units), requested and received average increases of 14.9% and 9.6% respectively (see Table 4, Chapter 6).

A large number of increases granted by the Commission, based on units, continued to be in the lower percentage ranges. Over one-half of all units that came to rent review were granted increases below 10%. At the extremities, 1 in 10 units received average rent increases at or below the guideline rate of 6% while only 1 in 100 units received average increases above 25%. (See Table 5A, Chapter 6).

Impact of Cost Factors

The whole building rent review process is based on the cost-pass-through principle which permits landlords to recover cost increases actually experienced or anticipated in the future, with certain limitations on financing costs imposed by the Residential Complexes Financing Costs Restraint Act. The actual costs to be considered are operating costs, capital expenditures, financing costs, financial loss, and relief of hardship.

The relative importance of individual cost factors and their impact on rent increases granted are summarized in Figure 5 below:

Figure 5

Relevant Cost Factor	No. of Hearings	Proport. of all Hearings	Average Total Increase	Portion of Increase Attributable to:		Impact of Relevant Factor on all Applic.
				Relevant Factor	Other Factors
		(%)	(%)	(%)	(%)	(%)
1. Operating Costs	1,368	98	10.0	5.0	5.0	4.9
2. Capital Expenditure	1,193	85	10.2	2.8	7.4	2.5
3. Financing Costs	323	23	10.7	3.1	7.5	0.9
4. Financial Loss	680	49	11.0	4.1	6.9	1.6
5. Relief of Hardship	77	6	11.1	1.8	9.3	0.1
Total Hearings	1,399	100	10.0	-	-	10.0 (10.03)

As can be expected operating costs continued to be the single most frequent and important factor in landlords' applications for rent review, and this was allowed in 98% of all decisions issued by the Commission. The rent increase granted due to this factor alone was 5.0% which is below the guideline rate of 6%. In terms of impact, increased operating costs contributed 4.9% to the 10.03% overall increase granted. This was the largest of the cost factors considered.

Capital expenditure was another major factor responsible for rent increases and this was allowed in 85% of all applications before the Commission, up from 68% two years ago. This is encouraging as it shows that the rent review process permits landlords to recover costs associated with maintaining and improving their buildings. The contribution of capital expenditure to the overall rent increase was 2.5% which is sharply higher than the 1.7% experienced in the previous year.

About one in four cases resulted in rent increases justified in part by increased financing costs. However, the proportion of rent increase attributable to this factor alone has been declining in recent years; it was 3.1% in 1984/85 down from 5.1% and 7.9% in the two years immediately preceding. The declining trend reflects relatively stable interest rates. The contribution of this factor to the overall rent increase of 10.03% was 0.9%.

As in the past six years financial loss was experienced by landlords in approximately 50% of all whole building review hearings. The impact of this factor on the overall rent increase was 1.6% virtually unchanged from last year.

The Residential Complexes Financing Costs Restraint Act

This Act limits to a maximum of 5% that portion of a rent increase attributable to financial loss arising out of increased financing costs incurred in the purchase of a rental property.

In more than half of the 680 cases where financial loss was allowed the increase in rent was limited by the application of the Act. If not for the Residential Complexes Financing Costs Restraint Act, these rent increases would have been higher.

Tenant Applications for Rent Rebate

In the year, 2,501 tenant applications for rent rebate were resolved, 1,800 (or 72%) by mediation and 701 (or 28%) through formal hearing. Of those resolved, two-thirds had the monthly rent reduced to the lawful amount and received rent rebates averaging $757, up 28% from $591 in the previous year. In the remaining cases no overcharge was found. The impact of the rent rebates was a refund of $1.3 million to tenants, representing rents in excess of legally permissible amounts (see Table 7, Chapter 6).

Tenant Applications Disputing Proposed Rent Increases

Of the 210 applications processed by the Commission two-thirds were resolved through agreement between the parties with the assistance of a Commission mediator, and the remainder went to a hearing. In 134 cases tenants were successful in obtaining reduction in the proposed rent increase averaging $26 per month. The remaining applications resulted in no changes in proposed rents (see Table 6, Chapter 6).

Appeal Hearings

In the year the Commission conducted 329 whole building review appeal hearings involving 21,562 units. In addition, appeal hearings were held involving 218 tenant applications disputing proposed rent increase and tenant applications for rent rebate.

Decisions were made in 315 whole building review appeals. Results show 38% of units appealed had the original rent increase decisions affirmed, 14% of units had their rent increases lowered (by an average of $21 per unit) and 48% of the units were awarded higher rent increases (averaging $18 per unit) than initially allowed.

The above results of appeal hearings may be found in Table 8, Chapter 6.

6. RENT REVIEW PROGRAM STATISTICS

The tables in the following pages provide important workload and results data for the Residential Tenancy Commission for the year. Some of these tables have already been alluded to in the descriptive material in the previous sections.
